

Travix and AirHelp raise bar of customer service

New service of Travix and Airhelp supports with flight disruptions

Travix, a leading online travel company, well known for its brand BudgetAir today announced the launch of its collaboration with AirHelp, the world's leading flight disruption compensation company and passenger rights advocate. The collaboration will enable the travel company's customers worldwide to pursue compensation for delayed, canceled and overbooked flights through a smooth and simple process at a low cost.

85% of European air travellers* don't know that following severe flight disruptions, they may be entitled to up to 600 euros in compensation per person if their flight is departing from the EU or arriving in the EU with a carrier headquartered in the EU. This is why Travix and AirHelp have joined forces to offer AirHelp+ to the travel agency's customers. Making the claim process smooth and simple for travelers, AirHelp+ will entitle passengers of a disrupted flight to claim compensation from the airline without any additional charges, including AirHelp's full support of their technology, data and legal team specialised in air passenger rights.™

Following the purchase of AirHelp+ as an add on to a flight booking, Travix's customers on a disrupted flight who are eligible for compensation will be notified of their rights immediately and offered to file a claim. Once the claim has been submitted, AirHelp will take care of the entire process of claiming compensation from the airline on behalf of the passenger to ensure they receive the compensation they are legally entitled to.

AirHelp+ offers global coverage, so even if the disruption has taken place where EU law EC 261 is not applicable or in a country without strong airpassenger rights, AirHelp will help the customer pursue goodwill compensation from the airline, typically in the form of extra miles or vouchers.
